

Architects You Should Know

COTTAGES-GARDENS.COM

CONNECTICUT HAMPTONS WESTCHESTER

SEARCH

PEOPLE'S PROJECT

DESIGN & DECOR

GARDEN

REAL ESTATE

EVENTS & ENTERTAINING

BLOG

Connecticut COTTAGES & GARDENS

WHAT'S NEW

THE LIST

Get on the List! For our E-News and Invitations.

Enter your email below:

GO

PARTIES

C&G DESIGN GUIDE

Your guide to the leading designers and design resources serving Connecticut.

JOIN OUR

C&G ROUNDTABLE
READER PANEL

STYLEBEAT

StyleBeat

INTERIOR DESIGN. STYLISH LIVING. HOME ACCESSORIES. GREAT RESOURCES

Faux Bois Can Be Fabulous

West Elm has worked with the motif as has fabric design from Jed Johnson. It has been a long time favorite of Bunny Williams. Faux bois is a classic.

Posted 09/06/11

COMMENTS

The Old Ball and Chain: Round Pendant Hanging

Fixtures

The good kind of ball and chain that is

Posted 08/24/11

COMMENTS

Beloved NY Antique Trove Sentimento is Closing

Some antique stores have a little magic in their mix. One such place, located in the Interior Design Building on East 61st, is saying goodbye

Posted 08/22/11

COMMENTS

ADVERTISEMENT

REAL ESTATE DIRECTORY

Search

CITY

Darien
New Canaan
Norwalk
Ridgefield
Stamford
Westport

Browse all listings

Orient Expression

Italian design visionary Mauro Lipparini makes his mark in the new style-conscious-China

by Maria LaPiana
room photograph by Barbara Kraft

See the First Photos Inside the Redecorated Governor's Residence!

Take a look at the first official tour of C&G's makeover of the Residence with Ken Dixon of The Stamford Advocate.

by Caitlin Losey

Litchfield, My Muse

Finding design inspiration during the change of seasons

by Philip Gorriain

C&G is Turning Heads with Pink Aid

Westport News covers C&G's Pink Aid design event at Mitchells to fight cancer

by Caitlin Losey

Grand Central Respite

Check out this amazing photography exhibit that just opened at Vanderbilt Hall

The 18th Century Revisited

Book excerpt from Clarence House: The Art of the Textile-Fabric for the Inspired Home

by Kazumi Yoshida with Sabine Rothman photography by François Halard
styling by Noemi Bonazzi

California Dreamin'

A return to America's wine roots: Napa and Sonoma valleys

by Business Sheri de Borchgrave

Architects You Should Know

Meet some of the most talented and successful architects in the area, experts who understand the importance of a well-designed home. They can help make your dream home a reality.

OUR MAGAZINES

SUBSCRIBE >>

GIVE >>

FIND A COPY >>

CALENDAR

OCTOBER 2011

← Previous Month | Current Month | Next Month →

SUN	MON	TUE	WED	THU	FRI	SAT
25	26	27	28	29	30	01
02	03	04	05	06	07	08
09	10	11	12	13	14	15
16	17	18	19	20	21	22
23	24	25	26	27	28	29
30	31	01	02	03	04	05

Thu, Oct 20, 2011

6:00 PM Fritz's Favorite Pies With A Twist
Dutch Drawings At Bruce Museum
Norwalk Quilt Trail

Search for:

Category:

Type of Event:

region:

Cottages & Gardens Sponsored:

Search

• View all listings •
• Submit an Event •

#CANDG

WHAT'S NEW IN DESIGN

#candg

CTCottageGarden Hot off the press! See the first photos of C&G's redecoration of the CT Governor's Residence! #peoplesproject <http://t.co/SINpaQKU> 19 hours ago · reply · retweet · favorite HamptonsCandG Hot off the press! See the first photos of C&G's redecoration of the CT Governor's Residence! #peoplesproject <http://t.co/sL4Bo3FE> 19 hours ago · reply · retweet · favorite

CTCottageGarden Excited about my shoot with @ScotHaney3 at the Governor's residence tomorrow #peoplesproject 15 hours ago · reply · retweet · favorite

See the first photos of C&G's redecoration of the CT Governor's Residence! #peoplesproject <http://t.co/sL4Bo3FE>

CTCottageGarden Excited about my twitter

Join the conversation

CONNECTICUT COTTAGES & GARDENS / OCTOBER 2011 / ORIENT EXPRESSION

SHARE    EMAIL  PRINT  FEED

Orient Expression

Italian design visionary Mauro Lipparini makes his mark in the new style-conscious China

by Maria LaPiana
room photograph by Barbara Kraft

There's a design revolution underway in China: A young, savvy (and affluent) society is embracing Western fashion, architecture and design as never before. To wit: the opening of a new Baker furniture showroom in Hong Kong and a record-breaking 622 pages in last September's fifth-anniversary edition of Vogue China. In Shanghai, residences are nearly all sold out in Royal Garden, an edgy, contemporary housing complex whose creative director is none other than Mauro Lipparini, the renowned Italian architect and designer. We caught up with Lipparini recently and he shared his thoughts on his work, his vision for Royal Garden and how it came to fruition.

You have been called a master of natural minimalism. Is that an apt description? "Minimalism" has, of course, informed my style, but it does not represent my stylistic ideal because of its inherent limitations. If I had to categorize my style, I would call it "essentialism"—with an idiosyncratic mix of rigorous, yet eccentric, extroverted forms.

What inspires your designs? For me, it's fundamental that each project I handle allows me to engage my fascination with the past, and simultaneously set forth my dream of the future.

You were charged with defining every aspect of the 3,500 apartments and townhouses in Royal Garden—from its façades to every indoor amenity. Describe your personal vision for the project. The most fundamental statement of the project's mission, from a creative standpoint, is the resident's well-being. The idea was to create a "residential oasis," an environment where a resident's sense of privacy is paramount, yet one in which the establishment of a community—founded on principles of well-being and relaxation—is also possible.

Describe the complex. It consists of two contrasting building formats; some extend along a horizontal axis, while others extend upward, vertically. In essence, we have a series of perpendicular "straight lines" playing off each other. Just as important, the residential structures are closely integrated with surrounding park space—manicured lawns, trees, reflecting pools—blending seamlessly with the project's natural areas.

What feeling/mood did you want the interiors to evoke? Based on my international experience in home interiors and furniture design, I was able to identify four different thematic lifestyles: "Warm and Cozy," "Light and Transparent," "Natural and Outdoors" and "Young and Colorful." Each theme was designed and furnished accordingly, appealing to differing tastes, customs and cultural affinities.

How did you achieve that? Our interior formats were thoroughly researched and carefully constructed; we've given each client well-designed solutions organized to fit personal needs and desires. The practice of coordinating materials, colors and optional features has become something of a science. In order to realize this ambitious project, I selected products from leading Italian furniture companies: Antonio Lupi, Boffi, Misura Emme, Paola Lenti, Poliform, Tisettanta, Zanotta, among them.

What is your favorite aspect of the project? What's exciting about the Royal Garden project is the opportunity it gives me to contemplate the home of the future. One of the challenges of the project is to render these homes warm and accommodating, rather than purely technical. Because humankind is forgetting about the pleasurable rituals of living, a related challenge has been to design homes that stimulate and nurture a humane attitude, a humanistic way of life.

It's clear that China is embracing Western and especially Italian design. What is the appeal, and why now? The essence of Italian design is the perfect union of form, function, style and charm—who wouldn't find that appealing? What's happening is that China's rapidly increasing purchasing power is having an intrinsic effect on how its growing upper classes define and show their wealth. Paradoxically, China's tendency to copy Italian originals has actually informed consumers of what well-designed and proportioned furniture should look like. Now homeowners want to own the "real thing."

In addition to your work as an architect you are a very prolific home furnishings and industrial designer. Tell a little about "Echoes," your latest collection for Roche Bobois. The "Echoes" collection evokes the pure graphic lines and sculptural geometries of my architecture. The materials' neutral hues lend great versatility to the collection, which encompasses virtually the entire home. In order to reach a diversified, global community, I articulated the design's pure lines with slightly abstract asymmetries. The materials, colors and geometries of the collection are contemporary, yet convey a calm, mature sense of timelessness.

THE LIST

Get on the List! For our E-News and Invitations.

Enter your email below:

GO

OUR MAGAZINES

SUBSCRIBE >>

GIVE >>

FIND A COPY >>

JOIN OUR

C&G

ROUNDTABLE
READER PANEL