SOUND IDEA

This BuzziPleat pendant has been designed to improve room acoustics. Created by 13&9, it's made from noise-reducing felt, pleated and smocked into structural and functional folds to maximise the surface area for sound absorption. The pendant can be hung from the ceiling or wall-mounted and is available in two different patterns, a range of colour options and in diameters of either 100cm or 150cm. From £772, BuzziSpace. (020 7253 3363; buzzispace)

Shapely vessels

Inspired by laboratory apparatus, Tom Dixon's glassware launch, Bump, is described as an elegant approach to the art of mixology, floral arranging and tea-making. Its design is a result of the manipulation of conical, tubular and spherical building blocks and double-walled glassmaking, combined with subtle pink and grey translucency. The collection includes a jug, glasses, teapot and cups, with prices starting from £45. (tomdixon.net)

Bookish style

Most of Pib's products are designed and manufactured by the company itself, and are exclusively available from its online shop. Founded in 2010 in Paris, the high-end designer now operates in several European countries, and its homeware and furniture ranges include this Zurich library solid wood storage unit, priced £570.
